Limds held in reserve for serveral years by the State Government are now opened to set tiers at their actual value.

These reserved lands lie along the eastern or Atlantic Coast, between St. Augustine and Biscapue Bay, one-half mile to six miles from the ocean, a arge portion being fa below the Front limits.

This is the only eastern section in the United States where it is possible to raise semi-tropical Irsit, and where early vegetables and fruits can be raised in time to catch the highest Northern prices.

Much of this land is owned by the Fiorida Coast Line Canal and Transportation Company, and bears a fine growth of timber, from which large sums may be realized. The section along the Indian River and Lake Worth is well settled, and the land is the most valuable in the State, the east cost being tapped by four railways, and the rivers along the coast being navigated by steamboars.

Improved transportation facilities and delightful climate (being so near the ocean the air is much more bracing than further luisned) make this an excellent opportunity for actual settlers.

Prices of land range from $2 per acro neward.

The Minister of Public Works of Brazil has drawn upon the treasury for $18,000 to pay the share of that Republic in the cost of the Inter-Continental Railway survey. A dispatch from Montevideo announces that Russell R. Pealer has been appointed the representative of Uruguay on the Inter-Contintental Railway Commission. Mr. Pealer is an American citizen who has been engaged in railway construction in Uruguay and the Argentine Republic for many years.

An Important Position Vacant.—Mr. John G. McGregor, who has been for a number of years chief of the Customs Division of the Treasury Department, today tendered his resignation, which act was entirely voluntary on his part. The position which he leaves is one of the most important in the Treasury Department. It is thought that his successor will be Mr. J. R. It May Be Arbitration.—It is probable that before long the President of the United States will be called upon to arbitrate between Great Britain and Venezuela as to the boundary between the possessions to the two countries. England has heretofore refused to submit the matter to arbitration, prefering to hold on to the land which it has practically without warrant taken from Venezuela. The dispute is a long standing one, and Venezuela being the weaker part has heretofore had the worst of it, especially as rich gold mines have been developed on the land which has been occupied by the British.

MOTLEY COLLECTION OF OFFEND ERS AGAINST THE LAW.

Sample Day in the Police Court-Judge Miller Untangles the Skein of Evidence and Pronounces Sentences Ac cordingly.

ome are black, some are blacker, nd some are the color of a chew of terbacker. This was how a poetical spectator at the Police Court this morning described the notley crowd of offenders that filed before Judge Miller. But some of them were white, and this added a little variety to the otherwise darkly-colored scene. Red and blear eyes told the story of why nest of them had been locked up.

He Objected to Smoke. per little gentleman, who answered to the name of Albert Parrish. He was charged name of Albert Parrish. He was charged by Officer Trammell with being disorderly, but he denied that he was and said that he had only objected to a nuisance and had been arrested fer complaining of it. He had gone to the K-street Market to get something to cat and had employed a colored boy to go with him for fear he might get sick and need a cab. He suffered with a weak stomach and the smoke from a little open stove over which an old market woman was striving to warm hereself offended his nostrils, and he expostulated in such a loud tone, so the officer declared, that he disturbed the passers-by. "You shouldn't try to hold court on the street," said his Honor. "That's what we are paid for, and if an officer doesn't do his duly you should appeal to the trial board, and they will see that you are protected. I'll take your personal bonds this time."

One of Red Bill's Gang. "He belongs to Red Bill's old gang, aid the officer, as a black boy steppe said the officer, as a black boy stepped into the dock, "and I don't think he's been sober for a month."

The boy, Henry Walker, was charged with being a vagrant, but, of course, he denied this, though he admitted that he was drunk on Saturday.

"Why don't you charge these men with being disorderly," said His Honor. "I don't want to fill the workhouse with great abled bodied men at this season of the year when outdoor work is just being commenced. At the rate they are being brought here you'll have all of Georgetown here before summer. Boy, you can go and you had better go to work."

An Anacostia Bar. Anacostia is the stronghold of the Jona dah and the Rechabite, and there are bu two calcons in the town. But it is said there are a number of places, retired spots, where those who want it can get a drink. George E. Davis was accused this morning of keeping an unlicensed saloon, but he demanded a jury trial and one of the first cases called in the new Police Court will be his.

A Police Court Love Story. "It came mighty near being a murder if this woman's testimony is to be be lieved," said Judge Miller this morning, as Emma Lowden, a buxom colored damsel, stepped down from the witness stand. Edward Fitzhugh was charged by John Bell with assault and he was also charged by Officer Molloy with carrying concealed wearons. The evidence of the witnesses developed the fact that Fitzhugh and Bell were both aspirants for the affections of the damsel, but she was fickle and persisted in having two strings to her bow. But they objected and came together on Saturday night, and Bell charged Fitzhugh with shooting at him. The prisoner was fined $25 for assault. He went down to the cells below and his rival walked away with the dansel with a broad grin on his sable countenance.

About Sunday Liquor Cases. ved." said Judge Miller this mornin

About Sunday Liquor Cases. All cases against persons charged keeping a saloon open on Sunday will be tried first in Judge Miller's court, and not in the new Police Court with the jury attachment. All other liquor cases may have the benefit, if any there be, of a jury trial, but as the greatest penalty to recling liquor on Sunday in the District is a fine of $40, the cases do not come under the provisions of the recently enacted law. In the Police Court this morning David Hoke was charged with keeping a Sunday bar, and Mr. Cahill, his counsel, produced evidence to prove that the license was not issued in the name of the defendant, but that he had purchased the business and the license had never been transferred.

Judge Miller held that the person in whose name the license is issued is alone rasponsible for violations of the law, and consequently the case was dismissed. During the discussion between the Judge and counsel the former admitted that the new Police Court law did not include Sunday cases. keeping a saloon open on Sunday will be

Hoke after the liquor case had been dismissed. He was charged with keeping a gambling house, and when the officers went to the place at 40 clock on Sunday morning they found half a dozen boys playing cards at a table in the corner. The officer testified that when the boys were disturbed at their game they started up from the table and 85 cents in money fell to the floor. The boys testified that they were not playing for money, and that the meney found on the floor fell from their pockets. But one of them admitted that he was holding a dollar in change in his hand while he shuffled the cards, and this rather staggered the de

Mr. Hoke said that when he left the place at 12 o'clock he ordered his bartender to turn out everyone and close the place for the night. THE SALINGER TRAGEDY.

Belief That Salinger Murdered His Comrade and Then Shot Himself. CINCINNATI, March 9.—The Coroner's nquest of the mysterious double suicide of Ernest Salinger and Isidore Frauenthal of Ernest Salinger and Isidore Francenthal has not yet been concluded. Coroner Bange is one of the few people here who believe that the affair was a murder and not a suicide. He thinks that Salinger killed Francenthal and then himself. His theory is that Salinger had committed some offense which his companion knew and to avoid exposure decided on a double crime.

and to avoid exposure decided on a double crime.

Several witnesses at the inquest have testified that Frauenthal was a great coward, and they expressed the opinion that he would never commit suicide. Some of the witnesses have shown a suspicious ignorance when questioned as to what they knew of the relations of Sainger and Frauenthal. A hired girl who worked at the large boarding-house in which the the two young men resided, stated that Salinger had his friend completely in his power and could compel him to do anything he wished.

There are not many persons that hold to the murder theory, but there is a mystery about the terrible occurrence which the coroner will endeavor to clear up.

Those who still insist that a murder was committed account for the letter signed by both men, amnouncing their intention of taking their own lives, that it was written by Salinger, and that he compelled Frauenthal to sign it and then shot him dead.

Michael McFadden sues David Hurley for $1,380 McFadden sues David Hurley for $1,380 for cause of action. McFadden says that in 1880 he with a son of Hurley were indicted for grand larcenty and placed on trial; that at the solicitation of Hurley and in consideration of the sum named, which was to be paid at the expiration of his sentence, he (McFadden) pleaded guilty to the charge, cleared Hurley and has now served out his time. Hurley declines to pay the bill, denying any such contract. Interested parties say there was a contract. The Hurleys are rich farmers living in fine style in the northern part of the county. The son's alleged lapse from the straight way was said to be due to liquor. He was a prominent society man at the time.

A Dublin letter says that Archbishop Walsh does not approve the extreme course taken by those of his fellow-prelates, who hold out excommunication as a penalty for the followers of Parnell. While holding positive views, both as to the folly and the evil effect upon the nation's political and moral interests of giving counternance to Parnell, the Archbishop does not propose to treat either clergymen or laymen among Parnell's supporters any differently, in a religious sense, from what he treats others. This, however, is not the view generally held by Irish prelates, and the indications are sere long the Irish people will have to choose between Parnell and the Church.

graphic Office by Captain Pettinridge, master of the ship Lock Eck, which had just arrived at Hogo, Japan, after a run of 158 days from Philadeiphia. It polatiout glaring errors on the charts of the British Admiralty and those of the United States, which are the kind generally carried on sailing vessels. He says that an January 3, while steering north by west in latitude 8.05, longitude 140.30, he sighted Sarol, or Philip Island, a small British possession in the South Pacific Occan, about six miles distant. For a long time there has been great doubt as to the position of these islands, as many surveying vessels sent out to locate them could not find them.

Captain Pettinridge knew that his position was correct by observations of the stars Acheman, Jupiter and Betelgenne. The latitude he found to be correct, but the longitude thirty miles out. It is believed that many vessels have been lost by striking these islands at night.

A singular phenomenon was seen out annuary 24 from the decks of the Lock Eck, when the vessel was suddenly surrounded by a boiling whirlpool, resembling the lower part of a water-spout. In a short time the vessel was surrounded by water-spouts traveling in all directions. One of the spouts was surrounded by water-spouts traveling in all directions. One of the spouts was surfect high, and another was seen inside of it, whirling in a contrary direction. As soon as the gale subsided all disappeared but one, which was very large. Suddenly a tongue of forked lightning from the heavens struck the spout and ran down to a point near the base, when it burst with a terrific report.

HIS TONGUE WON'T WORK.

A Man Who Can Only Talk to His Brothers.

Danicey, Conn., March 9.—A man who has conversed with only two persons in life lives in Danbury. He is John Pratt, life lives in Danbury. He is John Pratt, an industrious and well-to-do farmer, and in the sixty odd years of his life has spoken to no one except his two brothers. He has gone to jail in preference to speaking a single word, and he would not outler a word in the presence of a stranger, or even his own wife, to save his life. Yet he has a voice as strong and vocal faculties as perfect as any man's. Some strange power binds his tongue in another's presence, an influence which is said to be due to his mother's antipathy to her father-in-law at the time Pratt was born. He has had two wives, and in the courting he was helped by his brother.

This supposed attitude of Huntington is attributed to his expressed determination to take the railroad out of polities.
